following a traditional asian diet that is high in grains and vegetables with small portions of meat has led to much better long-range health outcomes than the typical american diet.